When Buildings Speak: How Architecture Shapes the Way We Live, Feel, and Connect

Join architect and author Sarah Robinson for a compelling exploration of how the built world affects our wellbeing and our connections to one another. Inspired by her new book, The Architecture of Resonance (Routledge), Robinson reveals how architecture “acts”—guiding our movements, moods, and interactions in ways we often overlook. From the physics of resonance to the poetry of everyday life, she makes a powerful case for designing environments that support healthier, more meaningful and more sustainable ways of living.

MCing by Dr. Arianna Dagnino, Dept. of French, Hispanic & Italian Studies, University of British Columbia

Sunday, 22 February 2026, 11.00 am-12.00 pm (PST), 2.00 pm (EST),
8.00 pm (Rome time)
On Zoom – In English

Sarah Robinson is an architect, writer, educator and organic farmer whose practice is based in the Langhe region of Piemonte, Italy. She is an Adjunct Professor in the department of Architecture Design and Media Technology at Aalborg University, Denmark and teaches in the NAAD program at IUAV, Venice.

She was the founding president of the Frank Lloyd Wright School of Architecture board of governors and co-edits the journal Intertwining. Her writing and interdisciplinary research is concerned with understanding the many ways the built environment interacts to shape body, mind and culture in a more-than-human world. Robinson is the author of The Architecture of Resonance: From Objects to Interactions (Routledge), a book that rethinks architecture as an active, lived process.
